

Dr. Jing Yu is a Doctor of Engineering and Postdoctoral in Marine Science. Currently, she is an associate professor and doctoral supervisor of College of Oceanic and Atmospheric Sciences in Ocean University of China, and deputy director of Sino-Australian Research Consortium for Coastal Management (OUC). She has been a visiting scholar and researcher in the University of New South Wales, Sydney Institute of Marine Science, Korean Institute of Ocean Science and Technology, and Okayama University in Japan.

Dr. Yu also serves as a member of the sub Technical Committee on Sea Area Use and Marine Energy Exploitation of National Technical Committee 283 on Ocean of Standardization Administration of China (TC283/SC1), a director of sub Professional Committee on Marine Demonstration and Evaluation Management of China Association of Oceanic Engineering, a director of Ocean Standardization Branch of Pacific Society of China, a member of Marine Resources Committee of China Society of Natural Resources, the secretary general of Marine Environment Professional Committee of Shandong Society for Environmental Sciences.

Dr. Yu has published more than 40 papers, participated in the preparation of 4 books on issues and 2 national standards related to marine environmental assessment and marine spatial planning. Dr. Yu also has presided over and completed 5 research projects at or above the provincial and ministerial level, including national key R & D projects, the Sino-Vietnam low-sensitivity regional cooperative scientific research project of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and key projects of China Association of Marine Affairs.