

Dr. Yang Yang is a Doctor of Management (Beijing Normal University) and a government-sponsored visiting scholar (Arizona State University). Currently, Dr. Yang is an associate professor, master supervisor, deputy director of the Department of Administration in the School of International Affairs and Public Administration in Ocean University of China, and deputy director of Sino-Australian Research Consortium for Coastal Management (OUC).

Dr. Yang also serves as a member of the Professional Committee on Sustainable Use of Resources and Disaster Reduction in Introduction to China Society of Natural Resources, a director of the Institute of Public Administration· Qingdao, a communication review expert of National Natural Science Foundation of China, and a reviewer of Landscape Ecology and other international journals. She has published more than 30 papers in the research of sustainable resource utilization, urban sustainable development, and marine spatial planning in coastal areas. And she has won 2 prizes of outstanding achievements in humanities and social science of higher education institutions of Shandong Province, China, and 1 prize of excellent achievements in the social sciences of Qingdao City. She also has presided more than 10 projects, including 2 national projects and 3 provincial projects.